NEURON-BLASTING DEBUT ALBUM
FROM ELECTRONIC MUSIC SUPERVILLIAN
MOLDOVER
REDEFINES D.I.Y. MUSIC MAKING

SELF-TITLED CD IS PACKAGED INSIDE A PLAYABLE "LIGHT THEREMIN" INSTRUMENT

Moldover is poised not just to grab the ears of adventurous listeners worldwide — but to incite sonic revolution with his genre-transcending, virtuosically crafted masterpieces. "Say It" features a circuit-bent Speak & Spell with a bad attitude, mixed with boiling atmospherics and the most meticulously crafted grooves you'll ever hear, while "Reflex" alchemizes source material from Moldover's own digestive system into simmering, soaring beats. Rawest and most raging is the spoken-word metal fist-pumper "Slipping In," a composite of acoustic and electric that would make Audioslave, Trent Reznor, and Henry Rollins.

Play the Album . . . Literally

A champion of do-it-yourself music making, Moldover would never hog all the fun for himself. That's why he designed his album's intricately beautiful, circuit board CD artwork to be a first-of-its kind light theremin. Moldover fans can not only enjoy his tunes passively, but actually create their own warped-out swoops and blorps, just by tapping the CD case.

Behind the Supervillain

Moldover has built an international reputation as a technological iconoclast, a fearless social innovator, and a musical loose cannon — in all the right ways. One of the first performers to elevate the mash-up format to the level of art, he introduced the world to the archetype of Live Re-mashing, blending artists like System of a Down, Daft Punk, and Billie Holiday into irresistible dancefloor elixirs in front of stunned audiences. Spinning further into the uncharted musical stratosphere, Moldover invented the Octamasher interactive DJ installation, an eight-keyboard monolith that gives even untrained listeners complete tweaking control over his mashup set. Most recently, he coined the term and created the principles of Controllerism, bringing the virtuosity and musicality of traditional turntablism to the latest generation of DJs and producers, who perform with cutting edge digital instruments.
